A strong force of police was concealed around the Arc de Triomphe and other potential centres of disorder. Several minor incidents occurred and a number of arrests were made, but serious clashes were avoided by keeping the different parties separate.

Memphis, To-day.

The final results of the Memphis commercial appeals poll has revealed that the Mid-Southern farmers are four to one in favour of some form of compulsory crop regulation.

The farmers however, narrowly voted against the continuance of the Bankhead Bill in 1935, due to dissatisfaction with the Administration and the allotment of the Provisions Act.—United Press per S. E. Levy and Company.

Impressive scenes were witnessed at the Cenotaph yesterday (Armistice Day) when His Excellency the Governor and high officials laid wreaths.—(King's Studio)

This graphic radio photograph, flown from rebellious Madrid by plane to London, and then radioed to New York, shows one of the numerous street fights being ended by the rattle of machine guns when revolution flared for a brief, but bloody, interval in Spain's capital. Numerous other insurrections against the conservative government in the rest of the nation were also quelled quickly by federal forces with a heavy death toll. A virtual dictatorship arrested all opposition leaders.

CHURCH AND STATE FEUD

ARCHBISHOP IN EXILE

Will Be Arrested If He

"SEDITION CHARGE"

Mexico, To-day.

The President of Mexico, General Don Abelardo Rodriguez, has decreed that the Papal Legate, Archbishop Flores, and the Bishop of Juejutla, must be arrested and brought before the criminal courts on a charge of sedition should they cross the frontier from the United States, where they are at present exiled.

It is emphasised that the Presidential decision in no way constitutes against the freedom of religious conscience, but was taken solely on the ground that the clergy cannot be allowed to continue intrigues against the Mexican law.—Reuter.

The feud between the state and the church in Mexico is of long standing.

It became acute first in 1926, when the closing of churches, but this controversy was settled in 1929. Under the settlement duly named priests were to be registered under the laws; church edifices and property were nationalised and placed under custodians, with the church holding the right to assign priests; religious instruction was banned in the public schools, but permitted within churches. The Cathedral in Mexico City was reopened in 1930 with a notable ceremony.

LAW BRINGS TROUBLE.
Trouble began anew when the legislature of the state of Vera Cruz in 1931 passed a law providing that there might be only one Catholic priest for every 100,000 persons. The legislature of Yucatan, the same year, limited the number of priests there to nine for 400,000 people. Similar restrictions were adopted by other states. There followed several instances of violence, including bombing of churches and the slaying of two priests in Vera Cruz.

LAWYERS UNDER PROTEST.
In 1932 Archbishop Diaz of Mexico announced that the church would accept the new Mexican religious laws, but only under protest. Subsequently a Papal encyclical charged the Mexican government with persecution. The Papal legate, Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, was expelled from the country by the chamber of deputies as a "pernicious foreigner."

Marshal Chiang Kai-shek flew direct from Taiyuan to Nanchang in a giant Junkers machine. The party took off yesterday morning from Taiyuan amidst a remarkable demonstration of enthusiasm, thus completing in just over six weeks a successful tour through 10 provinces. Despite the strenuous travelling and changing conditions of climate and food, the Generalissimo's health seems to be improved.—Reuter.

Beauty And Skin Treatment

Different Shades For Blondes And Brunettes Women In The East

You have learnt a truly great art, if you can spend hours by the sea, or on a tennis court and finish up looking as lovely as you started.

The tropics demands this art of all women, and so if you have trouble with your make-up, you must know how to prepare your skin before applying it.

Perhaps it is the colours of the powders and rouges which puzzle you, when you notice that your favourite make-up has an annoying way of looking wrong under the tropical sun. Perhaps you are looking for cosmetics which can bathe with you and which salt water does nothing to harm.

These are some of the problems of make-up which beset the woman in the East. The following hints should be very helpful.

A Regular Routine

First, how to keep make-up on, or how to prepare your skin to keep its make-up on. No last minute application of a wonderful lotion will do it—you must give your skin a regular routine, if you want to look as cool as a cucumber.

Dry skins want oil, lots of it, to counteract the drying sun and air and salt.

Greasy skins want the pores closed, so that the heat will not open them wider and wider, and let in more grease than ever. A normal skin strikes the happy medium.

Here are the general rules. For the dry skin, skin food applied faithfully every night, will prevent that horrid flaky look. If you find this a little heavy for a hot night, use liquid skin food, this dries into your skin almost immediately.

Then in the morning, after your usual cleansing, use a lotion for the powder base. If you are going on a journey by car and want to protect your skin as well as keep it powdered, there is a combined cream which does both these jobs well.

Complexion Milk

My advice to those suffering from a greasy skin is—get rid of the excess oiliness, for no powder on earth can persuade make-up to stay on an oily skin in the heat.

Always use an astringent and a complexion milk as a power base. A slightly astringent one is a boon, or, if you prefer it, a special liquid with powder in it is lovely. Noses only can be covered with a liquid that makes powder stick like a limpet.

If your skin, in spite of its greasiness, becomes rough or a little burnt, the liquid skin food is best.

Normal skins, as well as dry ones, need nourishing in the tropics, but the astringent complexion milk is splendid as a powder base, for most skins become a tiny bit oily after hours of exposure in the heat. A lotion such as the following is excellent as a slight astringent and helps to keep the skin cool.

Orange flower water 2 ounces.
Zinc sulphocarbonate 30 grains.

Eau de Cologne 4 drachms.
Glycerine 2 drachms.
Tincture of Cochineal 1 drachm.
If this should prove too strong more rose water should be added.

The Right Blends

Now for the colour changes that your make-up must go through. With a sun-tanned skin, your cosmetics cannot be pink and white. If you wish to retain the pink and white look and still look sunburned the following cosmetics will help you to achieve the effect.

Of course, blondes and brunettes will have different shades. Let us deal with the blondes first. For powder, there is a delicious shade styled "Aprilla" which blends beautifully with an orange lip-stick and rouge to match. This is a lovely combination. Brown mascara completes the blonde make-up.

Remember, when your neck and arms are sunburnt to use an apricot liquid powder, when you put on evening dress.

Now for the brunettes. Powder for them should be slightly darker and warmer in tone—Rose Rachel is delicious, and blends perfectly with Sunburn Rouge with a lip stick in the same shade.

Black mascara—and the brunette is ready to face the world.

Waterproof Cosmetics

What about make-up when you bathe? Do remember that "land" make-up is hopeless for the sea, so invest in waterproof cosmetics if you are going to bathe.

There is a waterproof cream that will prevent a shiny nose, and which will stick to you through thick and thin.

Or, if you prefer, there is a cream powder which is equally faithful, which is made in a brown shade to tone with your tan.

Waterproof liquid rouge, indelible lipstick, and a waterproof eyelash cosmetic—and you will look just as entrancing when you come out of the water as when you entered it, and with no fear that your make-up has disgraced you.

Beautifying The Arms

Another beauty bugbear women in the East have to contend with is hair on the arm. The sleeveless dresses reveal this distressing fact. It can be made unnoticeable, or removed temporarily.

If the hairs on your arms are fair, the advice is to leave them alone. It is natural to have a slight growth of hair—it softens the outline of the arm—and without it there is a naked look. So leave it alone, if it is fair.

But perhaps the growth is dark, in which case bleaching is the method to use. Use peroxide of hydrogen to which has been added a few drops of cloudy ammonia, and paint this on the hairs with a brush. See that the hairs are wet, and let the liquid dry naturally. This has to be persevered with and in time the hairs, as well as being bleached and almost unnoticeable, will weaken and break off.

If the growth is coarse, as well as dark, a treatment combining bleaching and weakening is best. For this add together six parts of baking soda, four parts of strained lemon juice and one part of peroxide. Add enough water to dissolve the baking soda.

Apply this mixture to the arms after washing them at night, and let it dry on the skin. Draw on a pair of old white stockings to protect the bed-clothes. Wash off next morning with warm water and a mild soap.

Repeat the treatment every night for a week, when the hairs can be rubbed off with a piece of pumice stone.

Apply cold cream if the skin feels at all sore. If you want to remove the hairs in an emergency, a depilatory is a boon, but its effect is only temporary.

YOUR COSMETICS TELL

Your powder, eye make-up and lip rouge should help to bring out your individual beauty. If they don't there is something wrong with your cosmetics, or with your application of them and you are wasting precious time and money on your make-up.

AN EXCELLENT BLEACH

Mix some starch to a smooth paste with a few drops of lemon juice and water. Apply it to the face and leave it until absolutely dry (this usually takes about twenty minutes). Sponge off with warm water. This is an excellent bleach and astringent.

"THE HOUSE OF ROTHSCHILD"—KING'S THEATRE

A battle of two Napoleons, the Napoleon of Waterloo, and Elba, and a Napoleon of finance, Nathan Rothschild, is set forth in mighty and masterly manner in "The House of Rothschild," the sensational historical drama which is George Arliss' greatest achievement since "Disraeli."

Arliss who plays two roles here, first as Mayor Rothschild, the father, and later as Nathan the son, has been given a magnificent cast with more than 70 speaking parts, and including such screen luminaries as Boris Karloff, Loretta Young, Robert Young, Helen Westley, and C. Aubrey Smith, Reginald Owen and Alan Mowbray.

The story traces the rise of a humble banking family from the ghetto of Frankfurt in Prussia, to the world-famous House of Rothschild. On his death-bed Mayor Rothschild gathers to him his five sons. They are at work, he tells them, for their race, and, foreseeing the days of international finance, he advises them to open five banking houses in the great capitals of Europe with a son, Nathan, heading them from London. From their positions as leaders of the world's finance they are to devote themselves to helping their people break free from the ghetto to live as human beings. And it is the loyalty of the five brothers to their father's trust that eventually brings power to the House of Rothschild, and freedom to them and to their people at the conclusion of the Napoleonic wars.

"CHAINED"—QUEEN'S THEATRE

Four noted screen players, Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Otto Kruger, and Stuart Erwin come to the Queen's Theatre in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's romantic drama, "Chained."

Written especially for the screen and for the co-stars, as is the present trend, by Edgar Selwyn, noted director and producer, the film story picks up the life thread of a wealthy shipping magnate, Otto Kruger, and the girl with whom he is enamoured, Joan Crawford.

With no break in either physical or dramatic movement, it sweeps from skyscraper to shipboard, where Joan meets and later falls in love with a young South American rancher, Clark Gable, who is returning with his friend, Stuart Erwin, from a vacation in the States.

"SILLY SYMPHONY"—ALHAMBRA THEATRE

The inimitable Mickey Mouse and his adorable little wife Minnie come to the Alhambra Theatre in a full-length feature film. The picture, which comes to the local theatre for the first time, shows Walt Disney, the creator of the cartoon, at his best, and offers the highest entertainment, especially to the children. In addition to Mickey Mouse, a pictorial record of the recent Military Tattoo is being shown.

"BERKELEY SQUARE"—STAR THEATRE

"Berkeley Square," adapted by Fox Films from the famous John L. Balderston play, is the current attraction at the Star Theatre.

Featuring Leslie Howard and Heather Angel in the leading roles, "Berkeley Square" is a fervid love story intermingling fantasy and reality in a romance which bridges two centuries and overcomes the barriers of time.

Included in the large cast are Valerie Taylor, Alan Mowbray, Juliette Compton, Betty Lawford, Ferdinand Gotschalk and David Torrence.

"FUGITIVE LOVERS"—ORIENTAL THEATRE

Superbly cast with two of Hollywood's most popular stars, Robert Montgomery and Madge Evans, "Fugitive Lovers," is Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's latest production.

The greater part of the action takes place on a Greyhound road cruiser en route to Hollywood from New York. Robert Montgomery, who is as daring in the thrilling prison escape scene as he is romantic, meets Miss Evans on the bus and falls in love with her.

The supporting cast includes Ted Healy and C. Henry Gordon.

There is little difference in the physical appearance of these groups but they were on opposite sides in the recent textile strike warfare in Georgia. The pictures, made at Arragon, Ga., show strikers (top) armed with sticks and clubs and (bottom) citizens sworn in as special police to guard the mills.

CHINA TO HONOUR SUN YAT-SEN

68th Anniversary Of Birth To-day

OFFICIAL OBSERVANCE

To-day is the 68th anniversary of Dr. Sun Yat-sen's birth, and Chinese nationals throughout the world will pay homage to a man who spent practically his entire life working for the independence of China, and who was responsible for the revolution which made China a Republic.

Official observance will be held throughout the cities in China.

The vault where the remains of Dr. Sun Yat-sen now lies, in the stately mausoleum on the slopes of Purple Mountain, outside Nanking, will be opened.

Of all the political leaders in the Chinese Revolution, Dr. Sun Yat-sen had the greatest connection with Hong Kong, for it was here that he received part of his education and spent the most formative years of his life.

Dr. Sun was born in 1866, in the Heungshan District, now named Chungshan, in the province of Kwangtung. As a boy he went to Honolulu, where he studied under his brother's care. Later, he returned to Hong Kong to attend the Medical College, graduating in 1894, and establishing himself in practice in Macao, where he organised secret societies and preached his revolutionary doctrines.

A premature, and ill-prepared, attempt at revolution was made and failed in 1895. He fled for his life, going successively to Japan, Honolulu and America and thence to Europe. While in England he underwent one of the most thrilling experiences of his life, when he was kidnapped in a London street by servants of the Chinese Legation and held prisoner for a week while the Legation officials waited to smuggle him away to China. He was saved from this fate by the efforts of Sir James Cantlie, his former tutor at the Hong Kong Medical College, who moved the British Government to interfere on his behalf.

In the course of his stay in Europe he formulated his famous Three Principles. In 1905 he was back in Japan, where a conference with other leaders was held, at which the main resolution passed was that the Manchu rulers must go; but it was not until 1911 that final success was achieved.

"HOLD THAT GIRL"—MAJESTIC THEATRE

"Hold That Girl," a comedy drama of a detective and a girl reporter, featuring James Dunn and Claire Trevor, is Fox's current release now at the Majestic Theatre.

James Dunn portrays an exuberant, police detective, while Claire Trevor is a girl reporter who crosses his path in the course of her duties. Claire's anxiety for headlines leads her into the meshes of the underworld gang.

BRIDGE NOTES

PLANNING PLAY

by Ely Culbertson.

When a partnership has reached a contract of three notrump and a small card has been led of the suit in which the Declarer holds the Ace in the Dummy and the Queen in his own hand, the natural impulse, all other things being equal, is to play low and hope to win a trick with the Queen on the first round or to establish the Queen as a trick winner for a later round provided Third Hand holds the King.

This is a sound principle but is subject to modification, particularly in cases where there is an unopened suit, the leading of which by either adversary would make impossible the fulfillment of the contract. In such cases as that the Declarer, of course, takes careful stock of his combined resources to determine if there is a possible manner of fulfilling his contract by refusing the "free finesse."

The hand below, which was sent to me by Mr. E. C. Welsh of Kansas City, Mo., is an example where South, if he permits East to win the first trick, cannot fulfill his contract because the powerful element of time will then run in favour of the defending side.

South, Dealer

Neither side vulnerable

North: S-A 7 3 H-Q J 7 2 D-A 10 C-A 8 5 3

West: S-J 6 5 2 H-K 6 4 3 D-K Q 5 C-10 9

East: S-K 10 H-5 D-J 9 8 7 6 4 C-J 6 4 2

South: S-Q 9 8 4 H-A 10 9 8 D-3 2 C-K Q 7

South reached, through what means I do not know, a contract of three notrump. I assume that North must have opened with the shaded bid of one club rather than one notrump, and that South responded with two notrump, which North raised to three. However, the bidding is not in question. Interest in the hand centres entirely in the play.

West's Opening lead was the spade 2, and when South took stock of his resources, he noted the doubleton diamond Ace in the Dummy and a doubleton diamond in his own hand.

If East won the spade trick and switched to diamonds and the driving out of the Ace on the second round would follow almost as a matter of course. South could count three sure heart tricks and possibly four, depending on the location of the King, three clubs, and possibly four, depending on a club break, success.

MUSCLES BETRAY SMUGGLER

Brawny Biceps Due To Saccharine

A man approached the Czechoslovak frontier from the Austrian side, and came to the passport and customs station at Dolni Temnov. His papers were in order, and by passing his hands over the man's pockets the customs satisfied himself that there was nothing contraband there.

Suddenly, however, he was struck by the remarkable muscular development of the man's arms. He asked him to take his coat off, and examined biceps of each arm, says Reuter.

They owed their "village-blacksmith" like contours to packets of saccharine. The would-be smuggler, Johann Illek, of Mutenitz, was then arrested.

FROG ARMY PASSES IN VILLAGE

Unusual Sight For Residents

An army of frogs passed Shih-meng, a village in Tientsin District, recently. The frogs, thousands in number, first appeared in a western street of the village in a long line and proceeded to the north, attracting all the villagers to the street.

The frogs, however, were not scared and proceeded as usual, disappearing soon at the end of the street.

one spade and one diamond.

If he got, but three heart tricks then his chance of making game would depend upon either some play yet to be determined or on a break in the club suit. The game-making trick might be made by the Queen of spades in the South hand, dependent upon the line of defense. If not, why then there was some chance of some future mistake by the opponents or some favourable break in the suit.

The Ace in Dummy was played to the first trick, and the heart finesse immediately taken. West won, and nothing also the diamond situation, now laid down the diamond King. South declined to win, but the Queen was continued, as East had given an encouraging signal in the diamond suit, and the Ace was forced out.

South now ran three established hearts, and East, who held the spade King and protection against the running of four clubs, was forced to make three diamond discards. East was now placed in the lead with the spade King and cashed his remaining diamond, but the Declarer then made the balance of the tricks with the Ace, King and Queen of clubs and the Queen of spades.

It is quite true that South could not have anticipated the entire line of play which developed but it is equally true that the play he adopted gave the greater opportunity for success.

MYSTERIOUS TRIO'S EERIE WORK

Britisher Hypnotises 30,000 People

Uxbridge, Middlesex, claims the only family of hypnotists in the world.

Mr. J. Louis Orton, the father, has hypnotised over 30,000 people since he began practising 35 years ago. Both his sons are hypnotists, too.

The mysterious trio thrill audiences with their eerie demonstrations in a local hall.

People from all parts of the country come to seek cures at Mr. Orton's small bungalow on the banks of the River Colne.

Hypnotists must keep in strict training.

"I swim all the year round and neither smoke nor drink," declares Mr. Orton.

For several years Mr. Orton collaborated with the great Emile Coue of "day-by-day-in-every-way" fame.

SPORTING PAGE

SERVICES FRITTER AWAY COUNTLESS SCORING OPPORTUNITIES

LAWTON MUST LEARN TO KEEP BALL LOW WHEN SHOOTING

Power Excels At Half-Back

NAVY TRIO VERY SOUND

A very keenly contested, first half ended with the Navy one up against the East Lanes.

The Lanes were the first to appear dangerous, and, following a good bout of passing between O'Donnell and Lawton, the latter had his shot well saved by Peeper.

Lawton is a good bustling forward, and quick to seize an opening, but his failing is his marked inability to keep the ball low when shooting. He missed several good chances by wildly ballooning the ball over the bar.

A little more steadiness would result in goals, and would give some encouragement to the hard-working defence, who had a continuous, and very strenuous, tussle with the speedy Navy forwards. Gorman came to the rescue time and again, clearing and tackling in great style, and he was always well covered by Swain.

Power's Good Display

Power was the pick of the half-backs, and he had a difficult task in trying to subdue the fast and tricky Gidding. Always well up with the forwards, he contrived to be on hand when his goal was in danger.

He saved one certain goal in the second half, when Baxter cut in and ran round the advancing Oxford, clearing the ball from off the goal line.

Oxford, though making some good clearances, did not impress, and seemed particularly weak in dealing with low shots. He unaccountably let an easy shot by Stanley slip clean through his hands and legs in the second half, giving the Navy a very easy point.

The Lanes forwards were slow, and showed little method about their play. Individually, Elliott, Ridings and Lawton were good, but their finishing was poor.

O'Donnell made the most of his chances in the second half and flashed across some good centres, but Ridings was the only forward to keep up with the ball, and he was easily stopped by Bowers and West.

STEVEN POLICE KEY-MAN

DESERVING of special mention in the match in which the Police beat the Lincolns was Stevens in the Police forward line. He played a very strenuous helping game. It was not so much in his own apparent efforts as in the openings provided by him for his partners, wherein lay his greatest value. By his well-judged falling back to relieve pressure he gave added confidence to the defence.

Johnson and Moss were well to the fore during the Police attacks on the Lincoln goal, both showing an aptitude for quick shots at goal which tried Meakin's powers to the utmost.

Greene and T. Pile, on the opposing wings, provided the inside trio with some excellent opportunities as the outcome of their

REST OF COLONY WERE LUCKY TO WIN BY TWO CLEAR GOALS AFTER BEING OVERWHELMED

AMAZING LACK OF FINISH

FOUR FULL-BACKS SHINE IN SCRAPPY GAME

(By "ROVER")

ONE of the poorest games of football this season was witnessed at the Valley yesterday when the Rest of the Colony defeated the Combined Services by two clear goals in the annual Armistice Day game.

The result was in direct contrast to the run of the play, the Services definitely having the better of the exchanges throughout the result should have been an overwhelming win in their favour.

INNUMERABLE OPPORTUNITIES WERE ABSOLUTELY THROWN AWAY, AND AFTER THE INTERVAL THE REST WERE HEMMED IN THEIR OWN HALF FOR PRACTICALLY THE WHOLE PERIOD, FORCING FOUR CORNERS AND ONE BEHIND DURING THE WHOLE 45 MINUTES' PLAY.

Conditions were far from ideal and ball control and passing was difficult, although both sets of intermediate lines shone with dazzling passes to their wing forwards.

The defences on both sides shared the honours of the day. Strange and Li Tin-sang playing brilliant football to keep the invaders out, while at the other end Mullane and West performed in like manner.

Pyatt, at right-half for the Services, and Lee Kwok-wai, for the Rest, were the outstanding halves. Pyatt covering Mullane well to break up the very dangerous Tam Kong-pak and Ip Pak-wa partnership.

Tam Kong-pak and Fung King-cheung shone for the Rest, each scoring a goal, the result of brilliant combination among the forwards.

Rest Handicapped

The Rest started at a disadvantage as numerous changes were made in the team. Rodger coming into goal in place of Wong Wing, while Silva Netto made his appearance at left-half. They were without the services of a right-wing and Wong Wong, the St. Joseph's custodian, was asked to fill the vacancy.

In the opening minutes of the game the Services attacked and Rodger was forced to his knees to stop a scintillating first time grounder from Jones.

The Rest retaliated, but Tam Kong-pak was given off-side when favourably positioned. From the kick, Fung obtained possession and sent a glorious pass to Wong. The right winger tore down the right wing and eventually flashed across glorious centre, which Cord misjudged and which Fung King Cheong turned into the net.

Soon after, however, the Rest were hemmed in their own goal area, and the Services were doing everything but score. Cannon went very close with a first-time drive, and soon after Jones shot wide with Rodger out of position.

Half way through the half the Rest were two goals ahead as a result of the best goal seen on the ground for some time.

Fung obtained possession and outpaced Pyatt to lob the ball into the Services' goalmouth. Tam Kong-pak, unmarked, dashed in to head a glorious goal as Cord advanced to punch clear.

ATHLETIC FAVOURED AGAINST S. CHINA 'B'

TO-DAY'S FIRST DIVISION GAME

The Athletic have made no change in their team to meet South China "B" in the premier League this afternoon on the Club ground, while the latter team have been somewhat strengthened by the return of Tong Kwan to his usual right-half position.

Following their excellent showing against South China "A" a fortnight ago, the Athletic are expected to win to-day's encounter.

The following are the teams: Athletic:—Sui Tim-lam; Ho Chor-ying, Mak Chiu-han; Tsui Ah-fai, Lai Kwok-chiu, Chan Chun-wo; Li Hung-ching, Au Ping-ming, Ho Ka-keung, Au Kam-fung and Fung King-yu.

South China "B":—Wong Wah-kai; Chung Chi-ying, Yu Hing-yuen; Tong Kwan, Lim Tak-po, Lee Kam; Yeung Shui-yick, Li Shiu-wing, Tsang King-ki, Cheuk Sek-kam and Li Shek-yau.

Williams saved the Borderers time and again against the Athletic. Hurns excelled at centre-half and Simmonds shone at forward.

Lo Hon-cheung, at left-back, and Ng Tak-wing, at centre-half were the leading Athletic men.

Eastern recorded their first win of the season when they beat the Club. Cheng Siu-hong, Sui Ning-shing, and Kwok Ying-wai were their best forwards.

Should Be Inside

Sabhan is too slow for a winger. He should be played at inside.

Lau Kim-fai showed very fine ball control.

Farrow was the only Club player to impress. His determination was admirable.

League Table Jottings

The Club lost their unbeaten premier league record, and how! St. Joseph's recorded their first win, but Kowloon nearly forced a draw. The Recreio were good value for their first win.

Kowloon sustained their seventh successive defeat in the Second Division. Eastern won their first brace of points. The Artillery were beaten for the first time this season. The Lincolns retained their 100 per cent.

SATURDAY FLASHES

THE Recreio were all over the Artillery on Saturday. The return of A. V. Gosano made the difference, and they were a pleasure to watch.

Beltrao, the Recreio centre-half played a capital game. His constant feeding of the forwards left nothing to be desired.

Pardoe and Durham were outstanding for the Gunners, but they lacked support. Generally speaking the Artillery team were two yards slower than their opponents.

Hopkins and Clancey did well in the R. A. defence, but they were faced with an almost impossible task.

Big Things Expected

On Saturday's form the Recreio are destined for big things.

Matthew (Lincoln) missed a penalty against the Engineers, but his side won.

The Engineers require more training as a team and need to concentrate on speeding up their forward line.

Though they beat Kowloon juniors by six clear goals the Navy might have reached double figures had they not slackened their pace in the second half.

Kowloon, however, were dogged by bad luck. Pereira failed to turn up and they commenced with 10 men. Then Duffield left the field with an eye injury and did not come back. Humphrey filled Pereira's place before the interval, but the team had then been entirely disorganised.

Seven Shots... Seven Goals

Besides scoring six goals, Glass netted a seventh, but it was ruled offside. He was in deadly form and never failed once.

"Shiny" Bright was the brains of the Navy side and the forwards provided admirable executives.

H. N. Lee was the best University player on view against the Artillery for whom Macmillan, in goal, showed excellent form.

Williams saved the Borderers time and again against the Athletic. Hurns excelled at centre-half and Simmonds shone at forward.

Lo Hon-cheung, at left-back, and Ng Tak-wing, at centre-half were the leading Athletic men.

Eastern recorded their first win of the season when they beat the Club. Cheng Siu-hong, Sui Ning-shing, and Kwok Ying-wai were their best forwards.

MACAO BEAT RECREIO IN FAST GAME

Portuguese Governor At Hockey Match

BRITTO'S GREAT DISPLAY

Before one of the largest crowds which has yet watched a hockey match in the Portuguese Colony, including H.E. the Governor of Macao, Lt. Col. Jose Antonio Fernandes de Miranda, the Macao Club yesterday defeated the Club de Recreio by 3 goals to 1 in a fast and well-contested game.

This is Macao's third victory in four games this season, and they have yet to be defeated by a local side.

A slight drizzle early in the day made the field slippery so that spectacular stickwork was impossible. Macao, however, maintained their reputation as a well-balanced team and the deadly combination of their forward line soon overwhelmed the strong Recreio defence—the strength of their team.

Ramalho opened the scoring for Macao after 15 minutes. L. Costa added the second goal 15 minutes later, converting from a corner hit. In the second half A. V. Gosano reduced the arrears after 10 minutes, but L. Costa clinched the game for Macao by scoring his second goal.

Britto saved the Recreio from a heavier defeat, making several very daring saves and injuring his hand on one occasion.

Recreio:—H. M. Britto; A. A. Mendes, Dr. A. M. Rodrigues, J. Goncalves, W. Reed (Capt.), P. Nolasco, Silva, G. A. Gutierrez, H. A. Alves, A. V. Gosano, N. Beltrao, and B. T. Gosano.

St. Joseph's Show Luck of Stamina in All Their Games

Only Late Rally Saved Two Points

ELMS AGAIN OUTSTANDING

What is wrong with the St. Joseph's eleven?

It seems to be the rule rather than the exception, that they give a highly pleasing display in the first half and then, after the interval fall to pieces.

After having had practically all their own way during the first half they allowed Kowloon to turn the tables on them during the second half on Saturday, and only a very spirited revival in the last five minutes saved them from having to share the points or, possibly, losing the game.

Elms at left-half was again "the life of the party"—he played a wonderful game. Very cool and deliberate in his work, his passes were perfection, and seldom did Lee or White get past him into the danger zone.

Fernandez also played a very good game on the left wing—he was speed personified and his centres were little short of being perfect.

Eastman had a tricky handful to hold in Fernandez and cannot be called to account for allowing him to get through occasionally. Costa played a good game, his length of limb being displayed and used to great advantage to the confusion of G. White and his men.

Stout Full Backs

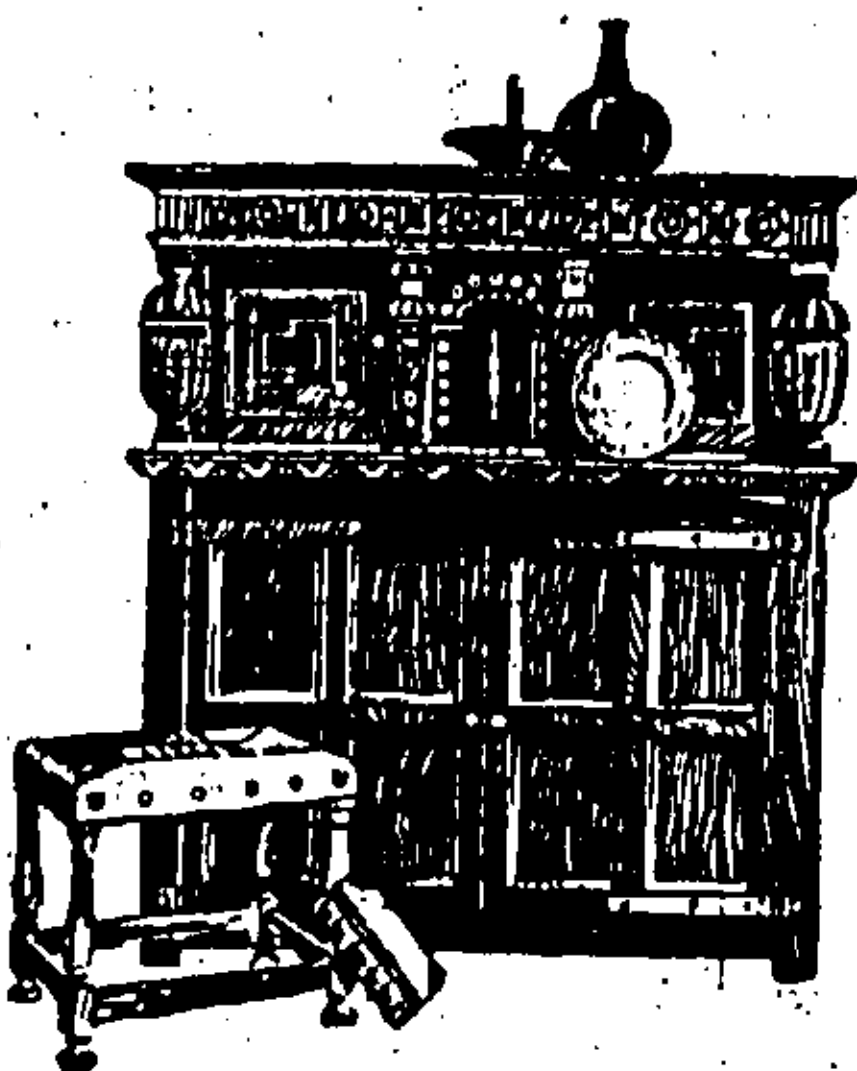

Wong did not have much work, as Leonard and Souza played excellently and the attack did not get too near the goal. Leonard played particularly well, his well placed clearance calling for applause time and time again.

The St. Joseph's forward line, as a body, proved an excellent combination, running through Kowloon's defence at will during the first half, and Lee, at inside-right, played a grand game. He worked very hard and fully merited the two goals which he netted to give his team victory.

Indifferent Passing

Kowloon's team was at sixes and sevens, there was little co-operation and chances often went astray because of indifferent passing. The forwards were greatly disorganised—they seemed to have no purpose in their play. The White-brothers appeared to have a little

LEN HARVEY FORFEITS HIS BOXING TITLE

JEAN BOROTRA
NEARLY BEATEN
BY NIGEL SHARPEENGLISHMAN'S TWO MATCH POINTS

BRITAIN v FRANCE

London, October 12.

(By A. WALLIS MYERS)
Masterful play by H. W. Austin and Jean Borotra, the respective captains, who each won two matches, produced exhilarating play and a close finish to the first day of the annual encounter between the International Clubs of Great Britain and France, at Queen's, yesterday.The Frenchmen, who reconciled themselves quickly to British conditions, fold a lead of four matches to three—adequate, perhaps, to inspire them with confidence to-day. But two of their victories yesterday were gained by the narrowest of margins—in Borotra's hectic contest with Nigel Sharpe only after two match-balls had been registered against the champion.Borotra has always had a good fairly at Queen's—an agent unseen, although it probably resides in his own heart, who rescues him from defeat when all the normal indications point to his downfall.

Sharpe Set For Victory

Sharpe, safely personified from the back of the court and ever watchful for the well-aimed passing shot, seemed to have the match in his hands. He had won the first set despite Borotra's admirable service, and an ominous close-quarter attack which gave him the ninth game and a lead of 5-4. The Basque appeared to have sprung forward with a characteristic regard for surprise.But the reaction from this volleying assault was long and serious. Sharpe took a sequence of points, and then, appearing considerably the fresher of the two and less liable to err, built up a strong lead of 5-2 in the second set. One fancied he began to visualise victory a little too early and to withdraw some of his intensive pressure.Borotra won the eighth game by Sharpe's mistakes, and then came an amazing ninth game, in which, after some dazzling rallies and two beautiful half-volleys by the Englishman, Borotra found himself 15-40 down. Twice Borotra served and raced in; he could not risk
a ground-stroke duel at this stage.
Each time Sharpe's return hit the tape, the ball falling on his own side.

Champion Fights Back

After this skin-of-the-teeth escape the fighting spirit of the champion—the energy which feeds on good fortune and which seems to ignore both age and fatigue—carried him to a familiar triumph.
He was never definitely on top until the last game, when he served with tantalising speed.Sharpe might easily have been three-love in the final set—he had a point for this advantage more than once—and even when Borotra had three match balls himself Sharpe manfully drew level and carried on the fight for two more games. But somehow one always felt that the crisis had passed after that fateful ninth game in the second set.Austin, with perfect rhythm in all his ground shots, and serving better than he has ever done in a match at Queen's defeated Bous-suet with the loss of only six games.
The left-hander could not resist the tide in the opening set, but in the second set, finding the pace of the floor, he made many beautiful
"fade-away" strokes down the line, and but for a service that was never really threatening, he might have carried the bout further.Borotra Beats Austin
In Great Duel

London, Oct. 13.

A crowd of about 1000, packed round the Queen's Club courts this afternoon, saw J. Borotra beat H.
W. Austin by 4-6, 8-6, 6-4.
A sparkling match it was, full of fine stroke play, with Borotra resisting that its length could only be three sets, and that therefore he could squander volleys energy plentifully.

The first set went to Austin by pionships, under the auspices of the United Services Recreation Club, close to-day. The draw will take place at the U. S. R. C. on Wednesday at 6.30 p.m.6-4, and the second to Borotra 8-6, and it still appeared that a little luck would turn the issue either way.In the opening set Austin overtook, against the service, a hostile 8-2 lead, and went to within a point of 5-3 before losing the ninth game. But in the ninth Borotra made his way easy for him by double-faulting three times.

Titanic Duel

The second set was a titanic one.
Its fortune turned Borotra's way after Austin had been robbed by a net-cord shot of the 4-3 lead.
Borotra seized his chance and led 6-3, but lost the next two games,
in which he gained only one point.
In the twelfth game Borotra was foot-faulted at set points and double-faulted. In the fourteenth and last Austin saved a set point before yielding the set to the Frenchman.The third set—and the match—went to Borotra at 6-4. France thus led by six matches to four.
A magnificent display it had been,
whetting one's appetite for the more serious hard-court championships of next week. In the final set, Austin led by 3-2 and later had cruel luck in the ninth game, which went to his opponent as the result of two more "unfathomable" net-cord shots.
Indeed, it must be said that Bor-otra in this respect had far more than his share of luck throughout the match. Nevertheless he played quite like his old self.£450 TOO LITTLE FOR demanding that Harvey defend his British-cruiser-weight championship against Eddie Phillips, of Bow, for £450, expired and Harvey automatically forfeited his title.Harvey told me later:

From that period to the interval
the Rest's goal underwent a continual bombardment, but, in spite of several glorious openings, Glass, Jones, and Smith either failed to shoot in time or were robbed by Strange and Li Ting-sang who were outstanding. Glass on one occasion was in possession when only a yard away, but Rodger held his drive.

Services On Top

In the second half the Services enjoyed most of the play and had the whole of the Rest's defence busy, Lee Kwok-wai and the two backs rendering invaluable service.
The Rest's forwards away on several occasions, but Pyatt, at right half, and Mullane and West,
the two backs, were unbeatable, and Cord never had an anxious moment.The Rest managed to force four corners, but Tam and Fung were too closely marked to do any damage.

with Issacs at centre-forward, and tried to take up the offensive. The Champions' defence, however, proved too steady.Minhinnett, the goal-keeper, was also outstanding.The first goal came in the latter part of the first half when C. Pile but deflected the ball into the corner of his own net.In the second half the United

Navy Defence Sound

The Navy defence was very sound and gave nothing away.
Bowers was a little shaky at the start, but soon settled down, while West played his usual stalwart part. Pyatt, McGuire and Love are a splendid half-back trio, each man working hard.Their distribution of the ball was very good, giving the forwards openings of which they made the most.Pyatt was perhaps the better of the three, tackling cleanly and sending Baxter away on every possible occasion. His shooting is accurate too, as was seen when he took a free-kick 80 yards out.Cannell's the forwards well, his speed and opportunism being always a danger to the Lancaster defence. Both wing-men were very fast, and their centres were always in the right place. They were exceptionally well supported by Smith and Stanley, who worked like trojans to get the ball and were responsible for many deft passing movements which led to the Navy scoring. Baxter was given many openings in the first

LABOUR AND WAR

Helping To Dispel Illusions

COLLECTIVE PEACE SYSTEM

Mr. Bjarne Bratoy's stimulating book "Labour and War: The Theory of Labour Action to Prevent War" provides, first, a useful discussion of the present state of the international machinery for the prevention of war and, secondly, a most realistic account of the international organisation of the Labour movement, industrial and political.

It is, as Professor Laski says in his preface, the first "serious study of the international means whereby organised Labour proposes to hinder the drift to war." The analysis of the organisation of international Labour is written from close experience—Mr. Bratoy was at one time on the staff of the Labour and Socialist International—and should help to dispel illusions that effective unity of action in a crisis can be easily secured.

Just as there is uncomfortable doubt about the manner in which the peace pledges of the Pact of Paris may be interpreted by nations, so there is confusion in the manner in which Labour has attempted to translate into policy the pledges to oppose war that have been repeated at all its conferences, national and international since 1920. "The field of anti-war propaganda," as Mr. Bratoy says, "lends itself peculiarly well to the Labour adherent with little patience for problems of administration and considerations of detail, but with a propensity for the spoken word and the response of a visible audience."

EXCELLENT BOOK ON THE WAR

Wilfrid Ewart Tributed

A visit to Hardy's Wessex is described in the late Wilfrid Ewart's "Scots Guard," which has come from Rich and Cowan. An excellent reviewer pays Wilfrid Ewart the compliment of saying that everything he wrote is worth reading.

Wilfrid Ewart "was one of the most remarkable writers on the subject of the War, and none of the many who came after him robbed him of his position."

IMPORTANCE OF THE BOOK TRADE

The importance of the book trade as a function of society is a capital subject. "A Publisher Speaking" is the title of four papers by Mr. Geoffrey Faber which his house of Faber and Faber will bring out. Mr. Faber speaks with authority.

THE REVIVAL OF BUDDHISM

Pioneer Monk's Life Sketch

CEYLON REMINISCENCES

"Saranankara—The Last Sangha-Raja of Ceylon" by Sir D. B. Jayatilaka—Lankabhinava Press, Colombo. Price 50 cts.

At the request of several of his friends, Sir D. B. Jayatilaka has published in book form the biographical sketch of Saranankara, the last Sangha-Raja of Ceylon, written 32 years ago and published originally in the "Buddhist".

"Modern history of Ceylon has no name more worthy of honour and grateful remembrance than the one which forms the title of this sketch," says Sir D. B. Jayatilaka. To appreciate the task, accomplished by Saranankara, a brief study of the condition of his time is necessary. His life covered more than three-quarters of the eighteenth century which dawned upon an unhappy Ceylon. The advent of the European marked the opening of an era of disaster which culminated in the ultimate downfall of the Sinhalese kingdom.

"The ruthlessness of the Portuguese were only second to the bigoted zeal which they displayed towards their faith," continues Sir D. B. Jayatilaka. The rule was one long tyranny, emphasised by the unscrupulous methods of conversion they adopted. Persecution and corruption were the powerful means they used for the propagation of Christianity. Their proselytising efforts were apparently crowned with success; the seeds of hypocrisy which were sown with such assiduity brought in a rich harvest of converts. Influenced by fear or lust of gold, thousands deserted their ancestral faith and received baptism, and with it the much more tangible advantages of office and honour, at the hands of their Portuguese masters.

It was at this time that Saranankara was born. The Buddhist Church was in a bad way. Monks lived idle lives. But Saranankara was determined to bring back his faith to its original purity in spite of the influence with the Royal family of the few idle monks who were content to lead the irreligious lives they led.

As a mere child he had shown a great love for learning, and though education was then at a low ebb, he had made himself proficient in the lay studies of the day.

He gradually got round him a number of followers and soon his name became popular in the island as a great reformer. Ultimately the King himself recognised his learning and Saranankara was given all possible help to further his mission.

He began very humbly at Ridi Vihare. He found that he could not find five true monks in Ceylon, the number necessary for the ordination ceremony. An ordination ceremony was a vital need as he could not ordain the monks who were willing to work for the regeneration of their faith and country.

After several failures, Saranankara persuaded the King to send an embassy to Siam from where the necessary number was brought over and the first ordination conducted.

That was the crowning glory of Saranankara's mission. The present position of Buddhism in Ceylon is certainly, therefore, due to his unyielding efforts.

Most important of the business transacted at the new League of Nations assembly in Geneva, Switzerland, was the nomination and election of Soviet Russia to membership in the world parliament of nations. Dictator Stalin and Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinov, partly because of tenaciousness with Nazi Germany and Japan, decided to join the league at last in order to ally public opinion on their side should war break out. In order to prevent humiliation for Russia, in the event candidacy being black-balled, France, England and Italy discreetly lined up votes so that the Soviet would find the welcome mat unrolled.

Three Clever Young Authors

Buried Conflict Of Personalities

SURFACE DRAMA OF SITUATION

"At Sea" By Arthur Calder-Marshall.

"Heron" By Romilly Cavan.

"Porcelain People" By Shamus Frazer.

The first three books listed above are all of them very clever, and Mr. Calder-Marshall's is, perhaps, the cleverest. It was clever of him, to begin with, to find a way of treating his theme at novel length instead of as a short story; for the plot of "At Sea," when outlined, seems typical short-story material.

A honeymoon couple take out a row-boat at an English seaside place; they lose an oar and are adrift during a night of bad weather; in the morning they are rescued, not much the worse for their experience. That is all that happens—outwardly.

But it is not outward experience—an experience that the author is so much concerned with, except as a frame-work to his characters' inward experience—an experience which the night of distress and danger focuses into a hard clarity, writes James Hilton in the "Daily Telegraph." Mr. Calder-Marshall illumines his people from within, charting their mind-tracks in long staccato soliloquies that do succeed in getting beneath the merely surface drama of situation into the buried conflict of personalities.

Quality Of "Movingness"

It is not a new technique (Joyce was experimenting with it twenty years ago), but Mr. Calder-Marshall handles it skil

A Revolution In Travel

In the report of the Traffic Commissioners for 1933-4 the statistics of passengers carried in road services vehicles attain almost astronomical proportions. How important an element in the daily movement of the population the road has become may be judged from some comparisons with the railways. While in 1933 the total of passengers upon the principal British railways was 1,101,000,000, omnibuses and tramcars carried 5,418,000,000, or nearly five times as many. Passenger receipts on the road were £57,900,000. Those of the railways were a million and a half sterling more, owing to the longer average journey. It is not necessary to go outside these figures to understand how seriously the railways have been affected by the modern developments of the motor-omnibus.

The number of public vehicles on the roads tends to decline somewhat, but the total of passengers increases, owing in part to the greater size of omnibuses and tramcars and in part to higher speed enabling these to cover a longer distance in the day. London is conspicuous among the great cities of the world for its preference for travelling by road. The Londoner makes on the average 496 journeys a year. Only 128 of these are made by train; the remainder by omnibus and tramcar or coach. Paris carries half its daily passengers underground. In New York the proportion is higher still. That difference accounts for the special difficulties of London street traffic, and for the comparatively high proportion of accidents. How the Londoner's compulsory addition to the road is to be combined with safety is the problem that the Ministry of Transport has to solve.

Ordered Progress In Air Strength

The five-year plan for air development sanctioned by Parliament is well in hand, and facts show that systematic and properly based expansion is in effective progress. The Air Ministry would indeed be false to its trust if it listed squadrons of new machines as fast as the factories could turn them out and then claimed that our dangerous weakness in the air had been remedied. No one would build warships without men to man them, and docks to take them. In exactly the same way aircraft requires pilots to fly them, mechanics to overhaul them, and aerodromes to serve as bases.

The personnel of the Air Force is expanding at both ends, by the enrolment of additional boys and by the retention of time-expired officers. Sites in East Anglia have been found to accommodate new squadrons as they are formed. The picture given is one of balanced development, of the steady execution of plans properly thought out in all their details. The country expects no less from the Air Ministry. The co-ordination of all the items of a general programme of expansion so that the enlargement of the Air Force shall achieve its full results at every stage of the programme is matter for the air experts. The average citizen cannot handle these technical questions, but we can rest assured that the whole matter is being properly taken care of by those whose responsibility it is.

A CIVILIZATION OF 4000 B.C.

Another Expedition To Go To Jericho

TRACES OF SETTLEMENT

In the hope of discovering new traces of a civilization which flourished in 4,000 B.C.—and possibly with an earlier period, when pottery was unknown—an expedition, led by Professor J. Garstang, of Liverpool, is to leave for Jericho in December.

Traces of human settlements earlier than those systematically excavated in the city and necropolis of Jericho between 1929 and 1932 are unknown to exist at a deep level, and may extend, it is stated, even beyond the limits of the outer walls. The expedition is being organized through the generosity of Sir Charles Marston to operate from Christmas to Easter. The staff has not yet been completed.

Prof. Garstang said that recent investigations at Megiddo and Beisan had disclosed traces of early settlements and civilization in Palestine.

"My own early excavations at Jericho," added the professor, "showed that deep occupation levels were to be found, which seem to indicate a period of settlement at least as early as those which have lately attracted so much attention."

Promising Field
"I discussed the matter at that time with the Director of Antiquities in Palestine, and he agreed with me that it was a promising field of investigation. We were, however, occupied with the upper levels of ancient Jericho and problems of the historical period, but we may now regard them as solved, and

ENGLISH ADONIS

Sir Kenelm Digby, a portrait of whom by Van Dyck is said to have been discovered in Stockholm, was one of the handsomest Englishmen in the seventeenth century.

Lord Clarendon, who was his intimate, described him as "a man of very extraordinary person and presence which drew the eyes of all men upon him."

His wife was also a famous beauty. She was commemorated by Ben Jonson in a series of poems called Eupheme.

Digby was an amateur physician and chemist. His enemies declared that he had killed his wife by giving her a poisonous powder to preserve her beauty.

SHES BY WEIGHT

Swiss hotel-keepers have invented a new device to attract visitors.

Each new arrival is politely asked to step on a weighing-machine.

If at the end of a week visitors can guess their weight exactly before a second weighing, the proprietor offers a 10 per cent. reduction of the bill.

The hotel-keepers have such faith in the fattening powers of their chefs that few visitors succeed in guessing right.

Your Daily Smile!

A coloured pastor announced to his congregation the following subject: "Brethren and sisters, I've come to preach a powerful sermon this morning. I've come to define de unexplainable, I've come to explain de unexplainable, and I've come to unscrew de unscrewable."

For Batter or Worse

A doctor says no man should marry a girl who can't cook at least roast beef and Yorkshire.

Answer That!

A well-known Royal Academician, who noticed a drawing of a fish by a pavement artist, asked the man what sort of a fish it was supposed to be.

"A shark, sir!"
"But you've never seen a shark," said the Academician.
"That's true, sir," the man agreed; "but then, don't some of those Academy chaps paint angels?"

Time to Laugh

An Englishman, according to legend, gets three laughs from a joke—first, when the joke is told, second, when it is explained to him, and third, when he understands it.

The Frenchman gets only the first two—he never sees the point.

The American man gets one—he won't wait for the point.

And the American girl, of course, gets none at all, because she's heard the joke before.

thanks to the generosity of Sir Charles Marston, we are organizing a fresh expedition to work the lower levels.

"It is impossible to say what we shall discover. The earlier occupation levels of Jericho have not been seen thoroughly, but I believe they are very extensive, and possibly go beyond the con- siderations of the walls of the later early settlements and civilization cities."

I previously found traces of them in a deep cutting after descending approximately 28ft. to test the relative ages of the inner and outer walls. They extended under the inner wall and as far as the outer one, and their indications that they dated back to a period before the pottery-using people.

"I would not be surprised personally to find contacts with the early Elamite civilization, and any connection with Babylonia are historically possible. The results of the work are bound to lead to investigations further afield for comparison with early civilization and a comparative study of material."

THE ARTIFICIAL SILK ROMANCE

INDUSTRY BORN BY AN ACCIDENT

UNLIMITED EXPRESSION

(By A. P. Luscombe Whyte)

London. subsidise a British plant for its manufacture and to buy its entire output—in exchange for the Dreyfus patents.

TO-DAY the artificial silk industry is one of the strongest in Great Britain. It creates a practically indispensable commodity. It is backed by a capital approaching 100 million pounds. It employs, directly and indirectly, 500,000 workers.

The story of the new industry is largely that of its two greatest pillars, the £32 million firm of Courtaulds, with its international ramifications, and British Celanese, Ltd., which with its allied firms in the U. S. A. and Canada has a capital of roughly £18 millions.

Fifty years ago when Courtaulds were prosperous makers of black crepe and British Celanese unthought of, a scientifically-minded French count dropped a piece of cellulose film on a hot stove and swore with annoyance. He picked up the sizzling fragment gingerly—and swore with surprise. From it were hanging glistening strands of a fine, silky thread. He sat down at his desk and wrote rapidly.

For nearly three centuries scientists had tried to reproduce artificially those exquisite threads which emerge by nature from the silkworm's body. They knew of the fortune which awaited the first man to do so on a commercial scale. This French Count Hilaire de Chardonnet was one of these scientists.

His discovery convulsed the textile world. In 1889 the first commercial specimens of artificial silk were shown in France. Financiers scrambled to back the new process. In 1891 13 tons of yarn were produced.

British experts were at first chary of the newfangled yarn. But again chance helped. Queen Alexandra then happened to be leading the revolt from the Victorian fashion of black crepe, with disastrous results to the famous old firm of crepe-makers, Courtaulds. The bottom dropped out of the crepe market. The directors of the firm were in despair. A new line had to be found quickly. It must not compete with the other well-established textile manufacturers.

At this critical stage in the firm's career came the first whis- perings of a revolutionary new yarn, and the more daring of the directors saw in the new process the only salvation of Courtaulds. They pleaded for a trial, and won, but the first trial, owing to poor machinery and inexperienced "experts," was a black failure. Only a passionate speech by one of the directors, Henry Tetley, persuaded the firm to risk capital in the experiment seriously.

That speech was largely responsible for what has turned out to be one of the fastest-growing of British industries, and one of the few which has sailed with ever-increasing figures through the doldrums of the slump.

Courtaulds had backed a high-priced outsider—and won. Their production of artificial silk from wood pulp increased steadily. The perfected yarn gradually found a market. In the few years before the war each year saw an increase of one or two million pounds of artificial silk manufactured.

Up till the war Courtaulds had practically monopolised the market with their own system. But the war was responsible for creating an entirely new process which was later to lead to the birth of British celanese.

The war brought an urgent demand for a new type of airplane wing "dope" to replace the existing highly inflammable material which was easily fired by enemy incendiary bullets. Two Swiss scientists, the brothers Henri and Camille Dreyfus, had been working for some years on just such a substance, which had been called cellulose acetate. The British Government learnt of their experiments. They offered to

The War Aftermath

But the Dreyfus brothers were business men. They knew the war would not last for ever, and believed that their product had valuable peace-time uses. With the aid of British finance they built the plant themselves.

They rushed up a £7,000,000 factory in Derbyshire, and the production of cellulose acetate went on night and day, until the end of the war. They erected a great plant in America and another in Switzerland—both for war-time production.

Then came peace and three idle factories.

For a while dead loss seemed inevitable. But the brothers were determined to save this loss. They knew of the great future of artificial silk. Courtaulds had proved that. They also knew that specimen fibres could be made from cellulose acetate. But a commercial yarn they could not make, and even if they could they had no idea how to weave or knit it.

But they were determined to save the loss. They did it—in three years with three difficulties to surmount. It took them two to produce a commercial yarn, and then they had to evolve machines which could weave and knit. Then they had to spend a year with 30 chemists "borrowed" from the Clavels in Switzerland. For the silk would not take existing dyes, and they had to find a new range.

The result of these years of experiment and doubt was the formation of the British Celanese Company in a post-war world which demanded silk under-clothes and stockings. The craze in 1921 for limited jumpers, each using up to 1½ lb. of artificial silk meant another boom.

Danger From Japan

The experts got to work and evolved new uses. Hats, shoes, dresses, men's suits, heavy furnishing fabrics and curtains, overcoats even, were made from the new yarn. And on top of it all the "athletic age" arrived, and the public cried out for tennis dresses, shorts and blouses, all of artificial silk.

New Bid For Colossal Cocos Is. Treasure

Another bid to find the colossal treasure reputed to be hidden on Cocos Island, off Costa Rica, Central America, is being planned in New Zealand.

The hoard is said to be worth between 12 and 20 million pounds. Mr. D. R. McVicar, a 58-year-old Scotsman, of Newtown, Wellington, claims to know the secret.

The clue will remain Mr. McVicar's secret until the expedition actually lands on the island.

WHAT STALIN THINKS OF ROOSEVELT

Doomed To Failure In Patching Old Order

COMPARISON REPUDIATED

Stalin, the Soviet dictator, repudiates any comparison between himself and President Roosevelt, "who merely tries to patch up the old order."

The President's programme cannot be realized under several generations, Stalin believes, and probably never.

These views are revealed in the record of the interview in July, between Stalin and H. G. Wells, now available.

A planned economy, Stalin held, was impossible without getting rid of capitalists.

"I do not belittle the personal qualities of President Roosevelt—his initiative, courage and decisiveness," he said. "Indoubtedly of all the leaders in the present capitalist world he is the most powerful figure; but as soon as he undertakes anything which seriously threatens the foundations of capitalism he will suffer utter defeat."

On the manner in which Britain manages her major "class struggles," he said: "Of all ruling classes those in England have proved themselves the cleverest and the most flexible."

"Take, for example, the strike of 1926. The first thing any other bourgeoisie would have done would have been to arrest the trade union leaders. The British did not do it. I cannot conceive of such flexible strategy being employed in the United States or Germany or France."

"The British have never forsaken small concessions or reforms, but it would be a mistake to think that these reforms are revolutionary."

BOGUS PRINCE IS SENTENCED

Man Who Ordered A Herd Of Cows

Sinni Winji, a native of Ceylon, who was described by a detective as "a naturally plausible scoundrel who appeared to obtain considerable enjoyment from the way he takes money from people who can ill afford to part with it," was sentenced to eighteen months' hard labour at Surrey Quarter Sessions, Kingston, last month.

Detective Harris said Winji's correct name was Hector Fernando. He had four previous convictions. At Windsor he represented that he was a native prince desirous of purchasing an estate for £48,000. He told a local butcher that he would have a staff of 40 servants, and gave him instructions to purchase a herd of Jersey cows and some pedigree poultry.

He asked the butcher to cash a cheque for £5, but the butcher, thinking this was a small amount for "his Highness," asked if it was enough, and Winji then suggested £7 10s. The cheque was worthless.

He arrived at an Eastbourne hotel with a liveried chauffeur, and kept an appointment with a well-known firm of motor dealers at another hotel. He told them he was acting on behalf of a native Raja, and intended buying several cars. He went for a trial run, and on his return found police officers waiting for him.

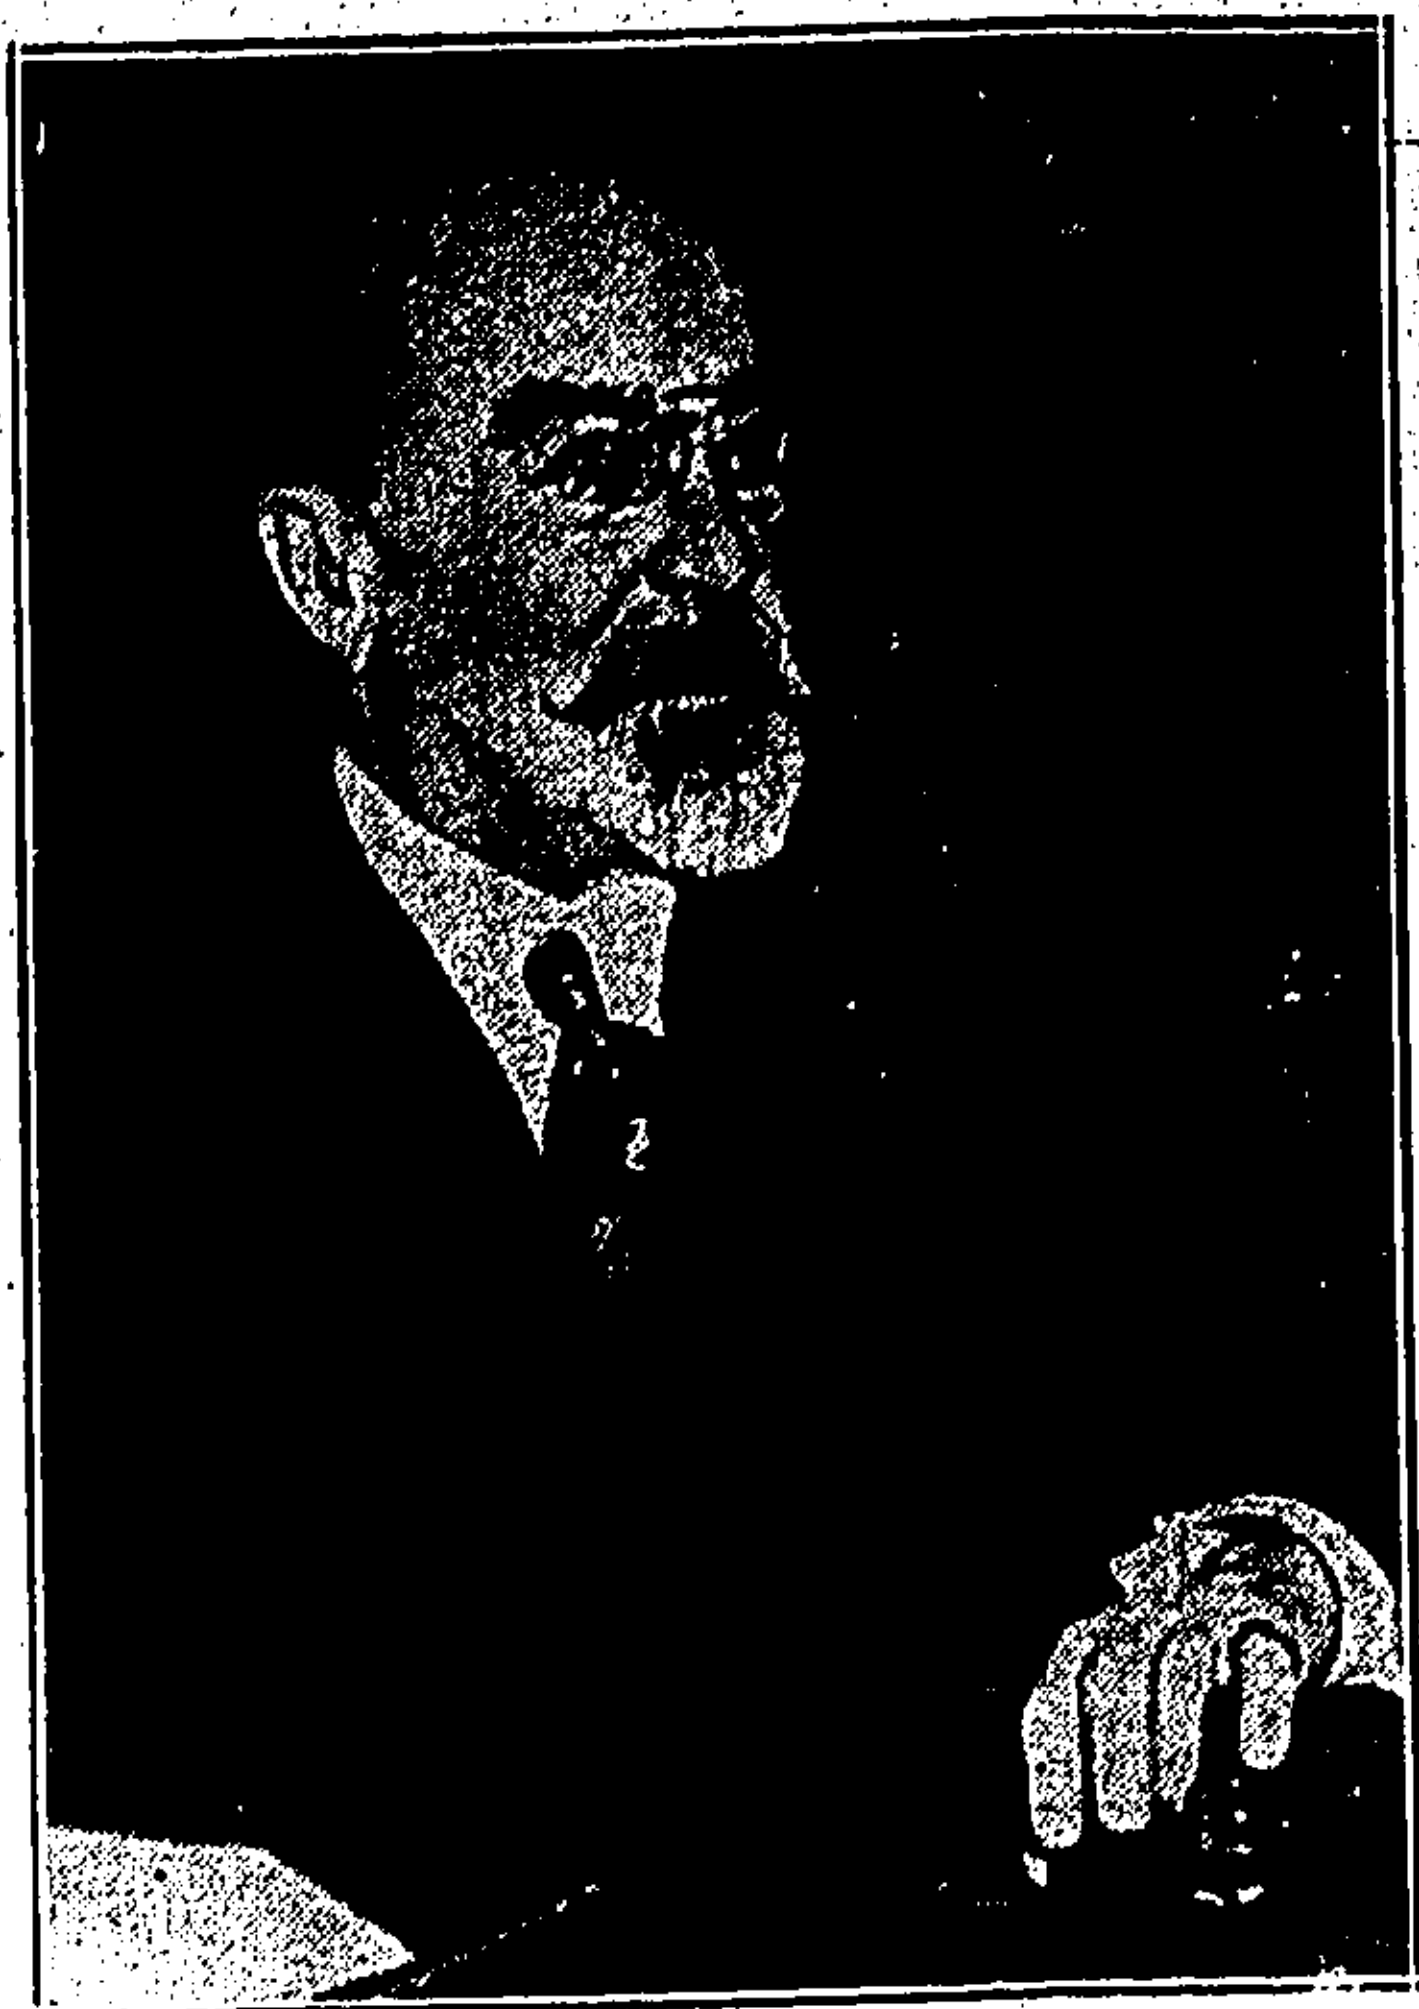

Winji, who addressed the court fluently for nearly an hour, said that between 1921 and 1923 when in England he had £10,000, and produced a bank statement to that effect.

CORRESPONDENCE

St. John Brigade Competition

[To the Editor "China Mail"]

Sir,—With your permission I should like, through the medium of your paper, to clarify certain rules about "The Amateur Art for All Ages" Competition which is being run by the St. John Ambulance Association as I have received many queries about the same.

In the first place—each entry should be accompanied by the entrance fee 50 or 30 cents, according to the Section in which they are entered, as this is in the form of a small donation towards the new Cheung Chau Hospital. Secondly, paintings may be original or copied, although naturally the former stand a better chance.

In London recently there has been an "Amateur Art for All Ages" Exhibition, the proceeds being devoted towards Charity.

It is intended after the local exhibition to send selected paintings to London for exhibition there, so I hope that the local attempt will be a success both from a charitable and artistic point of view. The Cheung Chau Hospital will be formally opened on Wednesday, November 21, at 3 p.m. by Mrs. Borrett. Special launches will leave Blake Pier at 1.45 p.m., and all those interested are cordially invited to attend.

R. LANGLEY,
Hon. Sec.

PALESTINE AS HOPE OF THE JEWS

Closing Of Avenues Of Emigration

Mr. Leonard Stein, addressing the Near and Middle East Association in London, said that in other parts of Europe besides Germany, especially in Eastern and South-Eastern Europe, the position of the Jews was deplorable.

They were being relentlessly squeezed out of opportunities of earning a livelihood, and the considerations which had led to the decision in favour of a Jewish national home in Palestine had become all the more cogent because of the gradual closing of all other avenues of emigration.

Millions of Jews saw nothing but the hopes centring in Palestine between themselves and blank despair. The swelling tide of Jewish immigration had admittedly created certain problems. The Palestine Government had done admirable work, but it was gravely handicapped by its preoccupation with holding the balance between Jews and Arabs.

No serious person would suggest that the solution was, to regard the Arab objections, as conclusive, and to leave the Jews to their fate. But neither was it a solution to take it for granted that there must be a perpetual and sterile brawl in which Great Britain's part would be to hold the ring.

"THE GARDEN OF MYSTERIES"

Local Performance Probable

It is understood that the "Hurma" show featuring Professor G. M. Andrews, well-known as The Indian Living Dracula of the stage, has arrived in the Colony after an successful tour of Canton and Macao.

It is anticipated that arrangements are being made with one of the local leading Theatres to present "The Garden of Mysteries" for a few nights before his departure to Shanghai where he is reported to be booked for performances.

CHIEF SCOUT AND FITNESS

National Standard Too Low

WHAT MUSSOLINI TOLD HIM

London. Lord Baden-Powell—the Grand Young Man of Scouting—intends to make up for the months of inactivity forced on him by his recent illness.

With Lady Baden-Powell, the Chief Guide, he set out on October 27 on a world tour which will not bring him back to this country until next July, when he will be 78.

There was little doubt of the Chief Scout's fitness when he presided, before departure, at a luncheon at the Savoy Hotel, at which he explained the plan of his tour.

"It is in accordance with the idea of promoting imperial and international goodwill through the personal touch that we are starting on another world tour," he said.

"Our main objective will be the Scouts' Jamboree in Australia, at Christmas. But the outward journey will enable us to see Scouts and Guides at Gibraltar, Toulon, Port Said, Aden, Ceylon, Malaya, and Queensland. The return journey will take us through New Zealand to San Francisco, across Canada, and down to New York."

Health Culture For Youth. The Chief Scout said that they were envious of legacies to universities. He spoke critically of the standard of our national physical soundness.

"It is," he declared, "lamentably low. The standing need in the upbringing of British youth to-day is an adequate system of health culture." He mentioned that Mussolini had once had a long talk with him on the subject, and added that the Dictator had shown how, by proper organization, it was possible within a generation com-

To-day's Short Story.

Fame Take The 'J' Car

By George Albee

WELL, Mr. Rodney, I guess you will be sort of surprised to hear from me. I am down here in Bridgeport, fifty miles away from home.

Well, Mr. Rodney, the reason I am writing is, I think the Company is not treating me fair. I think every man has a right to tell their own side of the story, don't you? So I will begin at the beginning, and then maybe you will agree I have a right to say what I'm going to say.

At Polytechnic High, Bertha was the most popular girl, and she was in the Mimerian Society, which has a motto Leadership, Scholarship, and Character. Well, I hate to toot my own horn, but I was in the Mimerian Society, too. When we told Miss Farnum we were engaged, she said it was fine, because we would be civic leaders together all our lives just like we were at Poly High. Then it was just get out and hustle, for Bertha and me, from the word Go. But we knew all the biggest men in the country have started at the bottom of the ladder, and you can not keep a good man down, just like you say yourself, Mr. Rodney, in your wonderful articles in Trainmen's Topics every month.

Bertha wanted to go to clerking at the Five and Dime store. This no-account brother of hers, Herb, had just gotten married, too, and his wife was working to support him, and they had a lot of fancy furniture they bought over to the Mercantile. It was no good, because they got a kind with pink kiewpies painted all over it, and then all the gilt come off right away, but at first I guess Bertha was pretty jealous. But I always say a woman's place is in the home.

"Working my way through Poly, I had one job at Lacey's drug store, and Mr. Lacey said I was the best soda-jerk he ever had. Then I had a job delivering the Clarion-Gazette on my bicycle. They gave me a bronze button to wear in my button-hole, because I never had any complaints on my route. Now I was through school. What was the sense of it all, I figured, if you did not get a job with a future to it?"

I knew I was sort of different from most fellows, with what everyone always said about me and all. We had a contest at Poly and I was

WORKMAN SHOT AT SHING MUN

Detective Fires Revolver In Self-Defence

SERIOUS RIOT LAST NIGHT

In an attempt to quell a serious riot between Cantonese and northern Chinese workmen at Shing Mun Valley Dam last night, a Chinese detective, Yung Chuen, shot a coolie who later died at the Kowloon Hospital.

It is reported that the detective's interference was resented by the infuriated workmen who turned on him. The situation became threatening and the officer drew his revolver in self-defence. In the struggle that ensued the revolver was discharged wounding one of the workmen. The man was rushed to hospital, but died shortly after admission.

Reinforcements from the Tsim Wan Police Station were summoned and they managed to disperse the mob. The detective, however, was beaten up by the workmen and taken to hospital where he lies in a serious condition.

Half of them are from countries where, their colour is a bit different from ours. Some of them become lawyers, with only a little law in practice. The only thing open is to become agitators, and so on."

ATTEMPTED TO KILL NINE PEOPLE

Twelve Months' Sentence On A Father

CUT GAS-PIPES IN HOUSE

A man who tried to kill nine people—including his seven children—by cutting gas-pipes in a two-room tenement was at Dundee sentenced to twelve months' hard labour.

The prisoner was Walter Finlister (32), of Watson Street, Dundee.

"If I thought you had wickedly designed this crime, I should have sent you to penal servitude," said Lord Anderson, "but I take the view that you acted on a sudden impulse."

Five women were on the jury of fifteen, and Finlister was found guilty on a majority verdict.

In opening the case, counsel said the allegation was that Finlister closed the windows of the bedroom and left open the door leading from the bedroom to the kitchen, where he turned on the gas-taps and also cut the service pipe leading from the meter.

The seven children were in the bedroom, and Finlister was found guilty on a majority verdict.

"This is a rabbit warren," commented Lord Anderson, when evidence was given that there were 35 tenants, some with families, in the tenement house.

A neighbour said that she found the three men unconscious in the kitchen and the seven children unconscious in the bedroom.

For the defence Mrs. Finlister said her husband had no sense of smell. She was away in hospital on the night of the alleged incidents.

Finlister gave evidence, completely denying the charge.

"I woke up with a terrible headache," he said. "I had never had a headache in my life before. I meant to go to a neighbour's but I fell. The next thing I recollect was waking up in the infirmary."

Fame Takes The "J" Car

It is sort of tough, being fired from your job when you have given seven years of the best that is in you. Well, anyhow, that other fellow had me sign the blanks, and see the doctor from the insurance company. And that doctor said I was sound as a dollar. All over! And they sent me out on the training-car right off the bat.

I guess maybe you never knew that the guy that took me out on the training-car said he had never seen anyone catch onto things so quick?

Well, now I will have to tell you some of the things about Herb, my wife's brother. Every time Bert and I are happy, he and this wife of his come over, and spoil it for us. They try to. To show you, here is what he said that time when I first got my job with the Company.

"This guy Rodney hasn't got any of those ideal he talks about," he said.

"He made that speech because the company needs some men right now and they sent him out to get them. That is what a personnel manager is for," Herb says.

I mean, that is how he is all the time. Like when I am working on the early shift on the J line and have to get up at 4 a.m. I do not mind it. I know it is the fellows that are willing to put themselves out that get the merit marks and raises and promotions. But then Herb and Hoty will come over to see us, and he will say: "Well, Ollie, Bert tells me you are rolling out of bed at 4 a.m. nowadays."

"That is right," I will say. "I do not mind."

"Why don't you get yourself a real job, like the kind I grab off for myself, where a man can sleep late in the morning?" he will ask.

I am never one to complain. Mr. Rodney. Ove the bureau in our bedroom I have a poem that I cut out of the Clarion-Gazette, by a poet, that is called 'The Man With The Smile That Wins. And on the wall I have a card, The Best Advice Is From The Firm Of Grin And Barrett. But that is Herb's attitude. He has no background. He is just ignorant, and does not know anything about loyalty or service or vision.

One week he is selling real-estate, and the next stock in fake oil wells, and the next washing machines; one week he is broke and the week after he makes some money and spends every cent of it. He will end up selling lead-pencils on the street, that is what Herb will do! And he and this wop wife of his have the gall to try to tell Bert and me how to live, that have our little home nearly paid for and not afraid to look any man in the eye! Or like last Xmas, when I was working extra shifts. He and Hoty came over to see us, and they would say things like, "Well, Ollie, I guess you will not be taking Bert to the dances down to the Odd Fellows' will you?"

"I don't mind," Bert will say. "Ollie has his future to think of. Ollie has vision."

Bert is no fool. She knows I am cut out to make a big success. She was a leader, herself, when we was at school. But then, after Herb and Hoty go, I will hear Bert crying at night when she thinks I am asleep, but when I am really lying awake planning how to give better service to our Company.

I am always doing little things extra, like helping old ladies with bundles and things like that; I was trying to tell you about some of the extra things I do last Friday when you told me to get out of your office.

But I mean, Bert is a game little sport, but I know she is thinking about those dances. I mean, all her friends will be there, and they will be saying, "Oh, Ollie and Bert are not here. I guess Ollie is ashamed of her and does not want to take her out." I am not ashamed of my little wife! Sometimes when I am reading the Sunday rotogravure section I look at the pictures and say to myself, "Gee, I could have gone to New York and made a lot of money on Wall Street and married one of those society girls."

But then I say to myself, "No sir, you stay right here in Riverside, with this sweet moral little wife of yours, and be thankful." No, Mr. Rodney, when I am rich I want to have my Bert right alongside with me, that has shared all my early struggles. But when Herb and Hoty say things like that it makes Bert feel bad. She is crazy about dancing. I am a pretty good dancer, if I do say so. We always win the cups down to the Odd Fellows. After all, we are pretty young. I still have my future ahead of me, and, if the Riverside St. Ry. Co. does not want me, why, maybe some other big corporation will. Maybe you will be sorry you fired me, some day. Ha Ha.

But I tell you there are times when I would like to take that Herb out in the alley and knock some of the sarcasm and bolshevism out of him. It is enough to make any right-minded man sick to his stomach. Only he is my wife's brother, and I have a weak heart from my mother's side of the family, and anyway fighting is no thing for gentlemen to do. If there is anything my parents brought me up to be, before they passed on to their reward, it is a gentleman. Maybe that is why the passengers on the J line are so crazy about me. I guess some of them will feel pretty sore about my being fired. Maybe some of them will quit using the street-car and start riding on the buses, you can't tell.

You can see what is does, Herb razzing me in front of Bert's all the time. He does it behind my back, too. Why would you believe it, one time he told Bert he was waiting for her to get a divorce, because I did not have brains enough to ever make big money! I found about it from a friend of mine that is going with a girl that is one of Hoty's girl-friends. Of course the things he says do not bother me. I guess no poor excuse for a success like Herb can dominate anyone with my strength of character. All the fortune-tellers I have ever went to have told me I am a master of men. Of course, a man with my education does not believe in fortune-tellers, but it is funny they should all say the same thing; I wonder why they say things like, "Well, Ollie, I guess you will not be taking Bert to the dances down to the Odd Fellows' will you?"

NEW ATLANTIC FARE REDUCTIONS
Special Excursion Rates Issued By U.S. Lines

A proposal for special excursion fare reductions was agreed to at the conference of North Atlantic shipping companies which concluded its discussion in London.

Mr. Stadlander, of the Norddeutscher Lloyd, was in the chair at the conference. The following official statement was issued:

"An invitation to become members of the conference was extended to the Cunard-White Star, Ltd. The invitation was accepted."

"The grading of the new French Line s.s. Normandie was submitted to the appropriate committee of the conference. A number of routine matters were also dealt with. The next meeting of the conference will be held in Paris in March."

It was announced later that special excursion rates on the United States Lines would be in force from Oct. 22 to April 30 of next year, and there would be a general reduction in fares, bringing the round trip fare to the equivalent of one and a third of the minimum one-way passage. There will be a limit of fifteen days' stay for passengers when they land from ships, not including the time of the cruise.

The following special rates will apply:

In the Manhattan and Washington—Tourist class excursion rate will be $30, as against the present round trip rate of $41; third class rate will be $29 15s.

In the President Harding and President Roosevelt—Third class rate will be $21 10s., as against $29 10s.

SIR JOHN SIMON'S ADVICE
Talk On "Specialism And Culture"

Sir John Simon, the Foreign Secretary, gave some advice to medical students on culture when he delivered the inaugural address of the Westminster Hospital School of Medicine at Central Hall.

His subject was "Specialism and Culture." How far was it possible, he asked, for a man about to plunge into the vortex of a specialised technical, competitive professional life to maintain his interest in and contact with a wider range of culture represented by non-professional subjects?

"I know the difficulty of this problem from my own experience," he continued. "Yet, with an effort, it is possible still to keep such contact with some of the under fields of culture of them as will make a man not only a doctor, not only a lawyer, but a civilised human being."

JAPAN'S FINANCES
Tax Increase Protest Bears Fruit

Tokyo.

In view of the unexpected and serious opposition of political and financial circles to the reported tax increases, Mr. S. Fujii, Minister of Finance, has decided to give up his plan to raise postage rates.

He is also expected to abandon his plan to carry over railway revenue to the ordinary budget for the next fiscal year, 1935-36, but will carry out the proposed imposition of "emergency profit" taxes, it is believed.—Rengo.
